Show compassion, not others' panties

Forget universal health care. Forget gun control. Forget the vast socioeconomic divide ripping the country apart. We have failed as a society when there are young ladies walking around with their skirts tucked into their panties.

Let me tell you a story. On a recent Saturday night, I was standing outside Gorilla Tango Theatre waiting for seating to begin. As waiting around turned into hanging out turned into people watching, I noticed that something had delighted the small crowd gathering on the sidewalk.

As the crowd grew, curiosity got the better of me and I strode over to see what everyone was so excited about.

When I peeked inside the door everyone else was watching, I saw it—rather, I saw her.

She was a typical, cute Bucktown woman: thick framed glasses, sequined headband holding her hair back, and vintage dress ... tucked into the back of her panties. That's right—there was a full moon over Bucktown.

"Someone should tell her!" I protested to my friends. They giggled and shrugged their shoulders.

Before anyone could take out an iPhone and tweet a picture, I walked back over to the lobby and straight up to the unfortunate woman. I told her she looked beautiful, except for one tiny thing: the accidental tuck. Moving faster than Superman after a handful of methamphetamine, she untucked her skirt and blushed.

"Thanks," she said, smiling at me.

"No problem," I answered. "If it were me, I'd want somebody to tell me."

The Germans have a word for deriving pleasure from the misfortune of others: schadenfreude. I admit I feel a wicked little thrill when I discover the girl who made fun of my bangs in high school works at a call center selling Shake Weights and Snuggles, but there's that and there's straight-up cruelty.

Perhaps I'm taking this incident a little too seriously, but it's only because I have been that girl so many times. We've all been Full Moon Over Bucktown at some point in our lives.

Who among us hasn't come back from a date, looked in the mirror and been horrified to see a piece of broccoli wedged between our front teeth? Who hasn't been chatting up a pretty young thing at the bar only to look down and realize his fly has been wide open for the entire conversation? Who hasn't been strutting down the sidewalk like it's a catwalk only to realize, hours later, that she sat in what appears to be melted Slushie?

Let's make a deal, Chicago. Please, I beg you, do not let me walk down the street with pigeon poop in my hair or a panty-baring rip across the back of my pants.

Tell me, even though it might temporarily mortify us both. And, I promise, I'll do the same for you.

By Georgia Garvey | REDEYE

The words “epic fail” have been so overused as to suck almost all meaning and novelty from the well-worn phrase. And yet, here RedEye sits, vainly searching for a better way to describe the crop of noodle-brained newsmakers who flooded the headlines with tomfoolery this week. Not least among them was LeBron James, who epically choked in the NBA Finals against the Dallas Mavericks, only to turn around and blame God and call his critics losers. If LeBron is the king of epic failures this week, here is his royal court.

« CASTING DIRECTOR

Whoever thought smoldering sexpot Rob Lowe should play creepazoid Drew Peterson, accused of killing his ex-wife and a key witness in the disappearance of another wife, in a Lifetime movie must have been drinking on the job.

« THE MEDIA

Weiner is the most important thing going on in the world. But a brief list of more pressing topics might include: extreme weather, the recession, Libya and whether Camille Grammer will return for a second season of “The Real Housewives of Beverly Hills.”

VIAGRA MANUFACTURERS

Perhaps Hugh Hefner, 85, was surprised when fiancé Crystal Harris, 25, called off their wedding, but not many onlookers were. Harris reportedly said she'd been having doubts for a while. What? A 60-year age difference is nothing!

NO JOKE: YOU CAN LEARN TO BE FUNNY

By Anthony Roberts

FOR REDEYE

Some attempts to be funny are doomed from the start. Like the time Paribe Meyer, at a friend's family reunion, corrected a woman who said chickens have hair instead of feathers.

"It was awkward because she was really mad that I was challenging her," said Meyer, 35, of Rogers Park. "So I tried to ease the tension with a joke and asked if some of the chickens had hair weaves then. It didn't work."

You can't blame him for trying to joke his way out of trouble. Humor—well-timed and with the right audience—not only can help defuse a stressful situation, but it's also an advantage in many of life's scenarios.

"One of the first things we notice when meeting new people is whether they make us laugh," Lloyd Price, director of marketing at dating site badoo.com, said in a statement. Badoo this month released a poll in which 30,000 people in 15 countries voted Americans as the funniest nationality. (Worst at making people laugh: Germans.) So if it seems like everyone else but you is quick-witted with a good sense of humor, can you learn to be funny? Experts say yes.

"You've got to breathe, get a nice pace and give people a chance to think and laugh," said Marz Timms, who teaches beginning improv at Chemically Imbalanced Comedy in Lakeview. He says about 80 percent of his students aren't looking to be professional comedians—they just want to be funnier in everyday life.

Confidence is key.

"You have to be in the moment," Timms said. "If you're thinking about it too long, nine times out of 10 it won't come out right."

And knowing your audience is critical, clinical psychologist Stephanie Livingston says. Most of the things people find funny depend on their upbringing and cultural cues.

"Some things may only be funny to older people, or younger people," Livingston said. "If your jokes fall flat, it could be your timing. But it could also be that your audience doesn't have the same frame of reference."

Maybe that's what happened to Stephanie Jackson at a church function recently.

The preacher asked for recent graduates to come forward, even those who'd graduated from "the school of hard knocks." Jackson, 28, of Douglas, thought it would be funny to take him up on the offer, so she stood up and cheered for herself. She was the only one who did.

"It was pretty embarrassing," Jackson said. "I guess my humor was just totally off."

ANTHONY ROBERTS IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

SITUATION COMEDY

A cleverly placed joke in a sticky situation can turn leers to laughs in no time. Careful, though: Saying the wrong thing could land you in hot water. So we turned to Chicago funnyman Lil Rel to learn when to go in for the laugh. A.R.

Lil Rel

When trying to get out of a traffic ticket

Never joke with the police. As soon as you try to be funny, the cuffs will just get tighter on your wrist. I tried to joke with a cop about not being able to see something on my car because he wore glasses. I thought it was cool because I wear glasses, too. Next thing I knew, my hands were spread out on the hood of the car.

When trying to get out of a fight

If there's a huge guy set on fighting you, just start making jokes about yourself. Like, "Man, look at my outfit, look at my shoes, look at my girl. You really wanna make my night even worse than it already is?"

When meeting your girlfriend's parents for the first time

A lot of guys compliment the girl's mother and say something like: "Oh, wow, is this your sister? She's so young and pretty." You have to be careful with that, 'cause then you lose points with the father. By this time he's thinking, "I know he sees that she's 65 years old and ugly." Now the dad just thinks you're a liar and will say anything.

LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE

When picking up women at a bar or club

It might help you to talk bad about the other chicks in the club. Like, "Man, these girls in here are busted! But you're nothing like that." Even if she looks just as busted as the ones you're talking about, roast the other ones and compliment her. And no impressions. Don't go over talking like Bernie Mac.

When joking via text or Facebook

True story, I met Derrick Rose and we hit it off. We became cool, but we weren't really friends yet. I told him I was looking for tickets to the game and he said if he had any left I could have them. So I texted him, "All right man, don't forget. For real." It was a joke, but I didn't put "LOL" at the end. I never got the tickets and never heard from him again. I've been sitting here like, "How did I lose that friendship?" That was the highlight of my friends! You gotta use LOL.

Falling Skies

8 p.m. Sunday, TNT

TNT and executive producer Steven Spielberg walk a tight-rope with the alien invasion series "Falling Skies" On one hand, they want to attract hard-core genre fans eager for thrilling sci-fi storytelling. On the other, they want to keep their show grounded enough in reality and the tropes of family drama to make it attractive to the general viewing public.

The high-wire act works, but not without some major bobbles.

"Falling Skies" opens with a chilling twist to the oft-told post-apocalypse tale. A child narrates as viewers see kids' drawings of what happened six months earlier when the "skitters" and "mechs" laid waste to Earth, wiping out the army, disabling everything that runs on electricity and turning the children into drones by harnessing them with spinal implants.

This is not the Spielberg of "E.T.," my friends. Children are not only in peril here, they also fight like soldiers. The show doesn't shy away from showing young kids with rifles who are ready to kick alien butt. It's the new reality, and the survivors understand that with about 80 percent of humanity wiped out, it's all hands on deck.

Our entry into the story—that child doing the opening voice-over—is Matt (Maxim Knight), the 8-year-old son of Tom Mason (Noah Wyle), a former history professor who is now second-in-command of the 2nd Massachusetts regiment. The group is a ragtag mix of military people and civilians run by a hard-ass named Weaver (Will Patton).

Wyle takes a low-key approach to Tom, infusing him with brains and the surprise that his has brawn. Not to mention a rage bubbling just under the surface, no doubt because aliens have killed his wife, enslaved his middle son, Ben (Connor Jessup), and forced him to make a militia-man out of his oldest son, Hal (Drew Roy).

"Falling Skies" has far too many quiet moments. Again, this isn't "E.T.," but it's definitely a Spielberg production. The man can't help but add cuddly moments to the thrills. They will be a major distraction for sci-fi fans who demand more aliens and shootouts over all the cute and sometimes corny family moments.

Ministry of Laughs

9 p.m. to midnight Saturday, BBC America

"The Nerdist" blogger Chris Hardwick hosts BBC America's new comedy block, which kicks off with my favorite talk show, the irreverent "Graham Norton Show" (Lady Gaga on the couch at 9 p.m.), followed by two great comedies. "The Inbetweeners" (10 p.m.) charts the misadventures of four awkward teens trying to survive high school. "Come Fly with Me" (10:30 p.m.) is a fantastically funny mockumentary set in an airport terminal, with "Little Britain" creators Matt Lucas and David Walliams playing multiple characters. Think of this show when your flight is delayed; I guarantee you'll be smiling.

All Things Bright and Beautiful

Owl City

Owl City's Adam Young has a very specific sound—a simple mix of naive vocals and optimistic synths—that connected in a big way with the surprise hit "Fireflies" and his debut "Ocean Eyes." Would interacting with the world outside his Owatonna, Minn., bedroom alter that magical combination? Apparently not. "All Things Bright and Beautiful" finds Owl City in the same happy-go-lucky place, but Young's gotten sharper lyrically and brought in a few new influences. Owl City may not have a wide range, but it does build its unique brand of pop incredibly well.

Brooke Elliott (below) remains the reason to watch this delightful series about a dingbat beauty who dies and is sent back to Earth in the plus-size body of attorney Jane Bingum (Elliott). Now opening its third season, the show has escaped the trap of focusing on Jane's weight, dealing instead with her weighty affairs of the heart. Oh, and she takes on some interesting and fun, if far-fetched, court cases. Get ready for new romantic road-blocks in the season opener, plus more Paula Abdul and another lively dance number.

Hell: The Sequel

Bad Meets Evil

All you really need to know about Bad Meets Evil—the duo of Eminem and Royce da 5'9"—is in the song "Lighters." The most pop-leaning song on "Hell: The Sequel" even features Bruno Mars singing a hook about living out dreams and wanting to see a "sky full of lighters." Instead of trying to match their rhymes to the hook, Eminem and Royce continue to try to manufacture shock by tossing in tasteless references to sex. Seems like a waste of time, much like the rest of these reheated leftovers.

Director Catherine Hardwicke's latest film is almost the same thing as "Twilight." The updated take on the fairy tale follows a brooding young girl, Valerie (Amanda Seyfried), who's being wooed by two mysterious hunks. The only thing that could get in the way of true romance is that she begins to suspect the man she loves is a werewolf. Visually, the film is spectacular. The images are so striking they almost make you forget things like how no one notices the cold in their snow-covered environs.

Honk! if you hate this movie

Something new and different for Jim Carrey ("Liar, Liar"): Playing a financially rich, emotionally bankrupt guy who must learn what's really important in life (duh: your kids) as a situation spins out of control. When Tom Popper (Carrey) inherits six penguins that amuse his children but distract him from his real estate acquisitions job, the question is which, oh which path will he choose as his personal and professional lives intersect?

The buzz: You know what's cute? Real penguins. You know what's not cute? CGI penguins that honk at Popper until he learns to potty train them and teach them to dance.

The verdict: Get this. A penguin poops on Popper's shoe and later, no joke, another one poops in his face. So funny. Also, Popper's assistant (Ophelia Lovibond) constantly uses words that begin with the letter "p," which alphabet enthusiasts are sure to find just delightful. Carrey generates zero laughs with one penguin. Then five more penguins arrive, and even youngsters should know the product of six times zero.

Jim Carrey and friends in 'Mr. Popper's Penguins'

Almost forgot to mention: Popper gets hit in both the crotch and the face by a soccer ball. Kevin James' "Zookeeper" can't be this lazy, can it?

Green Lantern (PG-13)

Somehow Hal Jordan (Ryan "Sexiest Man Alive" Reynolds) has become a renowned fighter pilot despite being a habitual quitter or something—the movie doesn't show him quitting but does say fear once caused him to break things off with Carol (Blake "Also Quite Sexy" Lively), which was clearly a major fail. Sorry, Hal, when a mystical ring chooses you to join the intergalactic tribe of green lanterns that patrol the universe for evil, you've got added responsibility whether you like it or not.

The verdict: Reynolds underplays Hal and zaps the energy from a movie that wastes everyone involved (including Angela Bassett and Tim Robbins in meaningless roles) and combines the look of a cheesy B-movie and a modern video game, if neither were any fun. Watch out, every other comic book movie on the way this summer; the senseless, stunningly boring "Green Lantern" will give the world a bad case of superhero burnout.

TOP SHOWS

MUSIC CRITIC MATT PAIS' PICKS

Yourself and the Air

"Who's Who in the Zoo." That's the name of the new EP from these lo-fi Chicagoans. It's fun to say, and it's plenty enjoyable to listen to. Read our interview with singer Erick Crosby at metromix.com. 9:30 p.m. Sat. $10. Subterranean, 2011 W. North Ave. 773-278-6600.

Florence and The Machine

Florence Welch is in the process of taking over the world. With only one album under its belt, Florence and the Machine is rising fast, and the group's commanding stage presence only reinforces that the Brits are the real deal. With Hanni El Khatib. 8 p.m. Sat. Sold out. Aragon Ballroom, 1106 W. Lawrence Ave. 773-561-9500.

Beady Eye

Technically, this band is not Oasis. Noel Gallagher isn't in it, and frontman Liam Gallagher has repeatedly noted that Beady Eye is totally different from that other band of retro-leaning English rockers. Still, though, psychedelic odes to the Beatles, with or without hooks, tend to fall into the same category. With The Dig. 8:30 p.m. Sat. Sold out. Metro, 3730 N. Clark St. 773-549-0203.

Sondre Lerche

Very quietly, this Norwegian singer-songwriter has hung around for the last decade based on likable pop songs and a charming demeanor that is hard to beat on stage. His latest is self-titled, even though it seems a little late in his career to do that. With Nightlands, Kishi Bashi. 10 p.m. Sat. $20. Schubas, 3159 N. Southport Ave. 8 p.m. Sun. $20. Lincoln Hall, 2424 N. Lincoln Ave. 773-525-2508.

Don't recognize golf's major winners without Tiger in the mix? This should help

By Scott Bolohan

FOR REDEYE

Since Tiger Woods won the 2008 U.S. Open, there have been 11 majors won by 10 different people. In fact, the past 10 majors were won by 10 different golfers.

With Woods sidelined from this weekend's U.S.

Open, there could be yet another new major winner. Here's a look back at the golfers who won majors since Tiger's last U.S. Open victory. If you know even half these players, consider yourself a huge golf fan. And none of these names are made up. Seriously.

SCOTT BOLOHAN IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Padraig Harrington

2008 British Open,
2008 PGA Championship

These accounted for the Irish golfer's second and third major titles. He became the first golfer other than Woods to win consecutive majors since Nick Price in 1994.

Angel Cabrera

2009 Masters

"El Pato" ("the Duck," for his waddle) also won the U.S. Open in 2007. After missing most of 2010 with injuries, he came close to winning the 2011 Masters before falling to seventh place.

Lucas Glover

2009 U.S. Open

Coming in ranked 71st in the world, Glover had never made a cut at his three previous U.S. Open appearances.

Stewart Cink

2009 British Open

Cink beat 59-year-old Tom Watson in a playoff. He's also notable for having the most Twitter followers of any pro golfer, with more than 1.2 million.

Y.E. Yang

2009 PGA Championship

He entered the final round down two strokes to Woods but came back to beat him by three. He became the first male native of Asia to win a major.

Phil Mickelson

2010 Masters

Finally, someone you've probably heard of. This was Lefty's fourth major, his others coming at the 2004 Masters, 2005 PGA Championship and 2006 Masters.

Graeme McDowell

2010 U.S. Open

He became the first Irishman to win the U.S. Open. That same year, he had the winning putt in the Ryder Cup. McDowell also has had a cameo on "Entourage."

Louis Oosthuizen

2010 British Open

The South African had made only one cut in eight previous majors. He said he looked at a red mark on his glove before every shot to improve his concentration.

Martin Kaymer

2010 PGA Championship

Kaymer won a playoff with Bubba Watson. He briefly became the world's top-ranked golfer in 2011, the second German to reach that status.

Charl Schwartzel

2011 Masters

The South African became the first golfer in Masters history to finish with four straight birdies. He also became the first guy name Charl to win the Masters.

RedEye's Puzzle Master will stump you with his brainteasers at redeyechicago.com/puzzler.

Enter a number between 1 and 9 in the empty squares. The clues are the numbers in the white circles that give the sum of the solution numbers: above the line are across clues; below the line are down clues. Thus, a clue of 3 will produce a solution of 2 and 1, and a 5 will produce 4 and 1, or 2 and 3, but, of course, which squares they go in will depend on the solution of a clue in the other direction. No digit can be repeated in a solution. Answer at redvechicago.com/puzzles. EDITED BY MICHAEL MEPHAM

The penguins go marching

This adorable flightless bird trend is back in business

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

The penguins are coming! The penguins are coming! Well, they've actually been forming cute little movie theater flocks for a while now, but you get the idea. The spectacularly "meh" adaptation of "Mr. Popper's Penguins" slid into theaters Friday (see Matt Pais' review, Page 15), reminding us that we'd just love a black-and-white buddy of our very own. Check out some other movie penguins that made us go "squeeeee!" DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM

'SURF'S UP'

Breed: Rockhopper

Did you know that penguins are really good at surfing? Like, really awesomely good? Bird dude Cody Maverick (voiced by Shia LaBeouf) leaves his icy home for the annual Penguin World Surfing Championship, joined by best rooster bud Chicken Joe (Jon Heder).

'HAPPY FEET'

Breed: Emperor

Go penguins! It's your birthday! Get your dance on! Mumble (Elijah Wood) can't sing to attract a mate, so he learns to dance—and teaches the rest of the species to shake its groove thang. Get ready for a 3-D sequel, out Nov. 18 ... and we still want to know why animals this talented don't hang out at Lincoln Park Zoo.

'MARCH OF THE PENGUINS'

Breed: Emperor

Although this movie kinda-sorta seemed like a glorified Discovery Channel documentary, we were totally drawn in to this tale of the harrowing lives of Antarctic penguins and their annual journeys. Plus, we're suckers for anything involving narrator Morgan Freeman.

'BATMAN RETURNS'

Breed: Danny DeVito (and Emperor)

Oswald Cobblepot probably is the creepiest/grossest movie penguin of all time, but he earns a spot on this list for having a really awesome rubber duckie car (complete with quacking radar). We also felt bad for his penguin sidekicks for having to deal with bombs strapped to their backs.

Larry David of "Curb Your Enthusiasm" was not happy to hear that "The Bachelorette" Ashley Hebert had her heart broken by suitor Bentley Williams. "I'm gonna kill that mofo. ... ## Mrs. Cutler's workout Bride-to-be Kristin Cavallari wants a body that wows as she exchanges wedding vows next spring with Bears quarterback Jay Cutler.

The former "Hills" star told people.com that she'll "probably keep up my regular gym routine for the coming months ... until spring.

And then probably two months before [the wedding]. I'll go at it harder."

Cavallari also plans to cut out alcohol for a couple of months before her big day and stick to her healthy diet.

Where's the beef?

Kelsey Grammer (below) has been spotted dining around Chicago while filming his Starz series, "Boss," but he's probably not ordering the beef jerky. The New York Post reports that Grammer's personal email account was hacked and all his contacts were sent the strange message, "Camille smells like beef jerky [sic]," referring to his ex-wife, "Real Housewives of Beverly Hills" star Camille Grammer. His rep confirmed the incident but declined to comment.

Britney Spears' "I Wanna Go" video is scheduled to premiere Wednesday, according to billboard.com, just in time to qualify for MTV's Video Music Awards. We don't know much about the video for the third single from her "Femme Fatale" album, but we'll guess that there will be dancing.

Weiner to play himself?

Will disgraced ex-congressman Anthony Weiner become the newest member of "Entourage"? According to The Hollywood Reporter, "Entourage" creator Doug Ellin asked Weiner to play himself for the HBO show's final season this summer. Weiner has remained silent about the offer, which was made before his resignation Thursday. The eighth season of "Entourage" premieres July 24.
